Doors open at 6:00 pm
The Mahaffey Theatre Plaza

This exclusive WHITE PARTY at sunset, in downtown St. Petersburg, overlooking Tampa Bay will be a festive celebration in honor of African American’s independence in the United States.
About Us

The Woodson African American Museum of Florida - formerly known as The Dr. Carter G. Woodson African American Museum - celebrates more than a decade-long history. The building was originally the rental office and community center for St. Petersburg’s first African American developed public housing community - Jordan Park - which was constructed in 1939.

Impact:

The history of African Americans in the St. Petersburg community and throughout the African Diaspora will be the central focus of programming at The Woodson African American Museum of Florida. The Museum serves to preserve this rich history for present and future generations of St. Petersburg residents and visitors to St. Petersburg.

Mission:

The mission of The Woodson African American Museum of Florida is two-fold:

1) To preserve, present, and interpret African American history and to engage a broad and diverse audience through these activities.

2) To promote an understanding among various groups that comprise the St. Petersburg community to enhance our ability as a society to respect, value diversity, and foster equal rights and social justice.
